Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Monday 11 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Milder, but colder in far north with rain then snow.

Today:
Rather cloudy with only brief bright intervals in the south and east, whilst some rain or showers affect the west. Rain will be persistent in the north-west, turning to snow over northern Scotland. Windy and generally milder than of late.

Tonight:
Cloudy with occasional rain, heavy in places, clearing away south from Scotland, Northern Ireland and Northern England, where clearing skies will allow frost and ice. Wintry showers far north-east.

Tuesday:
Rain becoming confined to parts of southern and south-west England, Wales and returning east across Northern Ireland. Dry and sunny elsewhere, a few wintry showers far north and east.

Outlook for Wednesday to Friday:
Rain spreading northeast on Wednesday turning to snow over northern hills. Turning drier from the west later in the week. Milder midweek in the southwest, otherwise temperatures below average.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.